This is a general habit-building resource, not medical advice. If you have persistent skin concerns, consider speaking with a qualified healthcare professional.
Warmly,
The Bloom & Bare Team

Email 2 — Keep the first step small (Day 2)

Subject: One small step is enough
Hi there,
A new routine can feel like a lot when you try to change everything at once. Choose one manageable action, decide when it fits into your day, and give yourself permission to adjust.
What is one habit that feels realistic this week?
Warmly,
The Bloom & Bare Team

Email 3 — Make your space work for you (Day 4)

Subject: Make your routine easier to remember
Hi there,
Try setting up your space so the things you use are easy to find. Follow product directions, avoid making too many changes at once, and keep the process comfortable for you.
Helpful prompt: What is one thing you could prepare tonight to make tomorrow easier?
Warmly,
The Bloom & Bare Team

Email 4 — A flexible routine (Day 7)

Subject: Your routine is allowed to change

Hi there,

Busy days happen. Your checklist is a guide, not a test. If you miss a day, you can simply return when you're ready. A useful routine should fit your life—not make you feel guilty.

If you'd like, reply and tell us what has been easiest or hardest so far.

Warmly,

The Bloom & Bare Team

Email 5 — Ask for feedback (Day 10)

Subject: Can we make the next guide more useful?

Hi there,

Thanks for spending a little time with Bloom & Bare. We're building practical resources for people who want skincare information to feel clearer and less overwhelming.

What topic would help you most next: routine basics, understanding labels, or building consistent habits? Just hit reply and let us know.

Thanks,

The Bloom & Bare Team
